❖ Measurement and Providing Value to the Business ISMA Keynote 2011

The real point is that IT and measurement personnel have the information, knowledge and skill set to provide value to the business, far beyond the costs they generate. But the information needs to be communicated in terms leaders can understand rather than in the techie language we all tend to think and speak ...

❖ The Planning Fallacy Revisited

This causes no end to issues in all kinds of systems: software, hardware, IT, manufacturing, student homework, you name it. One study did find that if people optimistically estimated the effort for a task and that task could be done in a single session, that productivity could increase.
